Rising rice prices can affect GMA's political future

FOR PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo, already battling a corruption scandal, the price of rice could affect her political future.

Rice is more than just a food in the Philippines. It's a source of livelihood, health and peace, sometimes by itself.

The country's estimated 90 million people consume 50 million kilos of rice per day—this means that every Filipino consumes 1.2 kg of rice daily—and the government is responsible for ensuring a secure supply of the staple for its growing population.

The cost of some local grains has risen more than 30 percent from a year ago while there have been no signs of easing, suggesting a tightening market.

"It's terrible, really terrible," said Renato Tirona, a former rice farmer, pointing to the rice price in Manila. "It's not just a food, it's a source of livelihood."

But here, vendors at the Naga City market, where rice is sold in bulk, are selling rice at a price that is 30 percent higher than a year ago.

"I don't know," they say, "but the price of rice is going up. It's not just a food, it's a source of livelihood."

But the government, which has been in power since 2001, has been unable to control the price of rice. The government has been unable to control the price of rice. The government has been unable to control the price of rice.

of the local rice that has been from July to September.

"Rice has a political dimension here," said a local farmer, an expert on the rice business for decades.

"It doesn't change, it would really be a disaster if the people against the government," he said.

The Philippines, one of the world's biggest buyers of rice, paid about $200 per metric ton at a tender this month for its national rice, more than double what it paid the year before.

Despite rising global prices, the government has bought about 1.2 million metric tons of rice out of the 1.8 million it needs to feed its population.

The National Food Authority (NFA), the grain purchasing arm of the government, that spends billions of pesos every year subsidizing rice to the public, is now one of the biggest donors on public finance, with rice subsidies in 2005 of nearly $1 billion.

But the NFA has only a limited impact. In local markets, vendors often tell customers they are out of rice, which is kept at $1.5 to $1.6 a kilogram, forcing them to pay nearly 30 percent higher for other varieties.

At the end of last month, government stocks were enough to last only days, below the official requirement of 15 days. During July to September the government aims to build 30 days worth of stock.

The President has ordered the NFA to buy rice from the market. But the NFA has been unable to buy rice from the market. The NFA has been unable to buy rice from the market.

Deadlock over cheaper drugs bill

Senate, House panels still stuck on 'generics-only' provision

By Dino Peralta

THE SENATE AND THE HOUSE of Representatives are still deadlocked over a controversial provision in the proposed "cheaper medicines" law that requires doctors to prescribe only the generic name of drugs.

The Senate panel in the Health and Consumer Committee has stuck in its position against the so-called "generics-only" provision.

"I believe it is still the issue that causes what we problem here," said Sen. Manuel Roxas II, medical undersecretary of the Senate, in a letter to the House in support of the law and chairman of the Senate Healthcare panel.

He said the existing Generics Act already requires doctors to enter down a medicine's generic name in their prescriptions at the same time allow doctors to recommend particular brands.

"We don't want to merely pass on the problem of adoption of the branded drugs from the doctors to the drugstore sales girl," Roxas said.

In an earlier interview with Rappler, President Manuel Villar said he was willing to accept the House version of the bill, including its "generics-only" provision.

"The president of the Senate is willing to accept the version of the House (and) to have that bill on cheaper medicines be passed immediately," he said.

Compromise

A compromise during the last legislative session, the House panel led by Delaware Rep. Antonio Abaya has suggested a three-year "generic provision" under the private-only provision would only take effect three years after the law is passed.

The Senate and House Healthcare panels have already agreed on all other provisions of the cheaper medicines law, which mainly aims to bring down the cost of medicines to the country through the parallel importation of cheap medicines from abroad.

Both panels have also agreed on empowering the President upon the recommendation of the health secretary to impose drug price controls in case of a national emergency.

"We agree that price of medicines will be lowered by increasing competition locally by bringing in more affordable drugs from abroad and by easing the generic patent protection for generic manufacturers," Sen. Roxas said.

Disadvantage

Sen. Felix John "Tit" Corpuz said he also aimed against the generics-only provision. The old local drug companies would be put at a disadvantage.

Large, more multinational drug companies could offer drug sales lower price mark-ups for their products.

The Philippine Medical Association, the country's largest organization of doctors, has also threatened to go on a boycott in protest of the generic-only provision.

Roxas said a technical working group composed of Senate and House staff would work during the congressional recess to finalize details of the proposed law. Congress resumed session on April 28.

The proposed cheaper medicines law has been discussed since the previous 10th Congress.

Palace welcomes respite from anti-GMA rallies

By Christine O. Bustillo

MANILA—PRESIDENTIAL COUNCILOR for political administration the President's administration in the past weeks, and hope that this will continue well into the 2010s.

But it looks like the worst of the political crisis is over for the Palace as President Macapagal-Arroyo was expected to attend a three-day investment conference in Hong Kong at the end of the month.

In last London message, the President's personal chief of staff said he is going for GMA's guidance. "In our search for the path toward national unity and the change toward peace and development."

"We live in a time of great moral challenges," Mr. Arroyo said, as he reiterated her government's bid to fight for the country's education and environment.

"We will work to fix the corruption that still plagues our nation," she also said, as she reiterated her earlier assurance that people must leaders who are "God-fearing, pro-poor, committed to make tough decisions, hardworking and loyal to the people of the nation."

Executive Secretary Eduardo Vito said he could only hope there would be less of the political noise that support up since last month following allegations that President Arroyo and her husband would sell them million dollar liabilities to the national broadband deal controversy.

"Being here for the government, let's hope the thing will continue especially after everyone would realize that there is a need for us to bond together," Vito said in a statement.

Asked whether the President's trip to Hong Kong at the end of the month indicates that the Palace believes the crisis is over, he said that it was Mr. Arroyo who "knows the current situation."

"It is a conviction that things cannot move forward to achieve what we want to see as an increase in the number of jobs will not be as intense as what has been the past few weeks especially on Feb. 20 (Interfaith rally) and last week's (peace rally)," Vito said.

Napocor: We'll have ample power supply

By Angelo L. Ho

THE STATE RAIL NATIONAL POWER CORP. has given assurance that Metro Manila and the rest of Luzon will have ample power supply during the Lenten season.

According to data from Napocor's power control department, the Luzon grid will have an available supply of an average of more than 6,000 megawatts (MW) a day from today to Monday.

Available supply has been placed at 6,200 MW for March 20 and 6,147 MW a day from March 21 to 31.

Peak demand, on the other hand, has been projected to reach 4,300 MW today, 4,800 MW on Friday, 4,400 MW on Saturday and 5,000 MW on Sunday.

This means that the Luzon grid will have power reserves of 1,900 MW on March 20, 2,307 MW on March 21, 1,747 MW on March 22, and 1,147 MW on March 23.

Based on historical data, the power reserves are always highest on Good Friday as demand tends to lower during this day. This is because almost all power-generating facilities either reduce their operating hours or cease operations altogether on this day.

Demand will drop back up on Saturday and Sunday.

In a separate interview, Napocor president Cyril D. Caldeza said that after the Lenten season, from March to June, the projected power supply level would still be enough to meet the highest estimated peak demand.

"There will be no speculative measures on any of the plants. All scheduled plant maintenance works have been moved to July onwards. All of our hydroelectric power plants have higher than sufficient water levels," he explained.

NLEX TRAFFIC ADVISORY

Setting at 2:00 p.m. today, March 20, Monday, Thursday, maintenance works will be undertaken to replace damaged concrete pavement at NLEX's entry ramp from EDSA (Balintawak) northbound.

We apologize for any temporary inconvenience to our motorists.

The works will be completed on Monday, March 24, at 6:00 a.m.

We advise motorists to take either the service road going to Quezon Highway or the Balintawak Crossover to reach NLEX.

'Final Odyssey' for sci-fi guru Arthur C. Clarke; 90

By George F. Johnson

British science fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke, who has been called the "godfather of space exploration," died on Wednesday at his home in Sri Lanka.

Over the years, Clarke's science fiction stories have been adapted into films, television series, and even a space station. His most famous work is the 1968 novel "The Great Silence," which is a landmark in the history of space exploration.

Clarke orbits

Clarke also was credited with the concept of communications satellites in 1945, decades before they became a reality. His work on the subject earned him the title of "father of the space age."

His scientific studies on space travel and his exploration of the future of the world and human beings earned him respect in the world of science, and in 1976 he became an honorary fellow of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics.

But it was his writing that did him his greatest fame and that gave him the greatest fulfillment.

"Sometimes I am asked how I would like to be remembered," Clarke said recently. "There had a dream once in a while, under a starry sky, and space pioneers. Of all these, I would like to be remembered as a writer."

Latest novel out this year

From 1940, he began a prolific career of both fiction and nonfiction, sometimes publishing both books in a year. He published his last novel, "The Final Odyssey," which is set in the year 2100.

A statement from Clarke's office said he had recently received the final manuscript of his latest novel, "The Last Frontier," co-written with Fredrick Pohl, which will be published later this year.

Some of his best-known books are "Childhood's End" (1953), "The City and the Stars" (1956), "The Nine Billion Names of God" (2002), "The Great Silence" (1968), "Imperial Earth" (1973), and "The Songs of Distant Earth" (1986).

When Clarke and his wife got together to develop a novel about space, they used to begin with several of Clarke's stories, including "The Great Silence," which is set in the year 2100, and "The Great Silence" (1968), which is set in the year 2100.

In 1960, two decades after the first, in 11 months, Clarke wrote "The Great Silence" in a year, which was his last novel in a year. It was his last novel in a year, which was his last novel in a year.

Nebula Award

Phonetic scientist Thomas Johnson said Clarke was a major influence on many in the field.

Johnson, who has been exploring the solar system through the Voyager, Galileo and Cassini missions in his book "The Great Silence," said he was inspired by Clarke's work.

Father's son

Born in Exeter, Devon, England, on Oct. 18, 1917, the son of a farmer, Arthur C. Clarke became a writer in 1940.

Clarke went to work as a clerk in the Ministry of Defense and then as a writer in London, where he joined the British Interplanetary Society and wrote his first short stories and scientific articles on space travel.

GMA's 'luck'

THIS IS TO COMMENT ON THE EDITORIAL "Lucky" (GMA, 3/11/09). To consider that a Marikina-Ancient Archaic house that was damaged or built on the peninsula despite the numerous conspiracy theories and protest actions against its existence, competence and value.

"Lucky" depends on how or where this, chosen event, life drama has been built to happen in power through the action of others, events, and, consequently, no, which could be the reason why it is in, limited and is finally exposed themselves. And there are the people who remain for "Lucky" promises in including for future work possible in the people's region. (as to the huge hundreds of circumstantial killings and displacements, whose victims were mostly opposed to the policies of the Archaic region, all these will be that life).

GSES appeals to columnist for objectivity

WISCONSIN, GENE, IN HIS MARCH 12 column, admitted that he "lacks and agenda" while the role of the Marikina Public School Teachers Association (MPSTA) in the so-called "Article of Faith" part of the Marikina-Ancient Archaic house.

By the time this issue or one, all of General's column on the GSES seems to be only his one-sided view that the GSES are the starting point. He has admitted the GSES is the starting point, by noting the fact that other persons find it as now being the fact that the GSES is the starting point. He has also given the GSES some credit for being the starting point, by noting the fact that other persons find it as now being the fact that the GSES is the starting point.

He went on to say that General's decision to be critical against the GSES and while he knows that he has all the rights to write what he thinks, he will still write like a man, not like a journalist, even if it is, possibly, if he cannot decide to his heart to be objective, he will have to be fair.

For the sake of fairness, there are some people of whom we like to quote. First, the GSES column was a full page, so it is important to the MPSTA's opinion, which also came out in a full page at. We do not believe that can imply that a question of bias. General's column was a question of bias.

more remains possible because of some reason for the house of faith. If people accept that his action is in fact lucky, they will not be thinking about and acting on the person's situation. But, what if they don't? People who do not want to be in the house of faith, they will not be thinking about and acting on the person's situation. But, what if they don't? People who do not want to be in the house of faith, they will not be thinking about and acting on the person's situation.

New brotherhood formed for Marinduque's Morions

BOAC, MARINDUQUE—Threatened by Oriental Mindoro's Centauros Festival, the provincial board here passed an ordinance uniting various Morion groups into a "brotherhood of the Morion" to preserve and enrich the annual tradition which originated from this province.

In the century-old tradition, men called Morions (some of them women, if you can detect the difference) appear in the six towns of the province.

During Holy Week, the Morion dance figures populates the town squares—clapping to keep the rhythm, playing drums on children, marching or dancing in groups, doing stunts or juggling, inspiring for everyone while safely taking behind their masks.

Melito J. Go, author of the ordinance, says the law seeks to promote a sustainable cultural industry by encouraging support between communities and the provincial government.

MORIONS run from their conventional duties locally as advertisement for a type of beauty.

According to the ordinance, the Morion dance is a traditional dance of the province of Marinduque, known for its beauty and grace.

The ordinance also states that the Morion dance is a traditional dance of the province of Marinduque, known for its beauty and grace.

Panlilio to miss rites renewing priest vows

CITY OF SAN FRANCISCO—For the second time since moving for public office last year, Pangnaspang Gov. Isidoro Panlilio will not be allowed to renew his priestly vows through the Marian Mass for more than 120 priests in Pangnaspang on Monday.

"We did attend the Mass but he cannot renew vows. That is the liturgical and canonical prescription and I know he's going to respect that," San Francisco Archbishop Patrick Antonio said.

The ceremonial is a consequence of the suspension of Panlilio's priestly faculties. It was imposed after the suspension a week before Panlilio, a priest of 28 years, filed his application of candidacy in the May 16, 2005, elections.

Kiss of peace

The Marian Mass is a three-hour liturgy where priests line up for the "kiss of peace" with the archbishop.

In last year's election, Isidoro, 49, 5, finished "second at the end of the (Marian) process (Catholic), watching and waiting in vain to be allowed to come up to the altar and share communion with the archbishop," said social worker Tom Brown, Panlilio's brother.

"Obviously three of his brother priests came to him for the traditional kiss of peace. They met him at his residence," Brown said in an account shared in the book "Laid to Rest in the past" which documented the struggle for good governance and responsible citizenship in Pangnaspang in the 2005 polls.

"It was a good thing. Among the 300 who had been attending as mission intervention team," she said.

Last Supper Mass

Panlilio, 51, said as before, he cannot join the celebration. He cannot join from a distance as was possible last time. He cannot join from a distance.

"But when I give some words in the Mass of the Last Supper," he said.

"I really value the opportunity to remain my citizenry, my people, my family, my friends. I love I am a priest," he said.

Since after the last time he celebrated on March 28 last year, Panlilio has spent his time traveling, attending Masses in Catholic and religious services in San Francisco, churches or places of worship like those of the Iglesia de Cristo, Iglesia Agustiniana, Pentecostal and Methodist. Asked how he stands for communion he said he has not been able to receive communion in his parish while in public office, he said. "I consider my priest especially prayer of devotion. I spend a lot of time before the Blessed Sacrament besides the other activities like the Mass."

"I believe the heart of priesthood is sharing, sharing one's life with the Lord and with the people, especially the marginalized," he said.

Antonio said Panlilio "is still a priest" only that his priestly faculties have been suspended.

While serving as governor, Panlilio would not say Mass, give communion and lead other sacraments.

Antonio said he helps Panlilio inside the city to his religious vocation.

"I always remind him to be faithful to his heavenly duty, to pray, to share with the community and trying to be close and closer to the Lord. So, he is a priest," Antonio said.

Antonio's spokesman said Panlilio includes reaching him to make the preparations that come with the suspension of priestly faculties, especially the consecration of the Eucharist.

Rites marking 40th Jabidah Massacre anniversary unite MNLF men

SEBASTIAN ISLAND, ZAMBANGIA City—They might not agree on some issues but on Sabah, Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) commander from Pinaric Marikina were to commemorate the 40th Anniversary of the Jabidah Massacre here in Sabah.

The Jabidah Massacre, which took place in Corregidor in 1966, became the catalyst for the MNLF rebellion and a catalyst of the Bangsamoro Revolution.

Sebastien Bay Hall of the Davao Revolutionary Council stated that they had been in various MNLF factions but united to commemorate the event.

"I know all of them despite entering Sabah, and I know they were not 100 percent happy because our chairman, Mr. Abubakar, is still imprisoned," he said.

Hadi said the commemoration of the Jabidah massacre would have been more meaningful had MNLF managed to negotiate his release.

"We would have a real religious celebration and commemoration for all of us here if MNLF is able to find a way," MNLF Chairman of the MNLF's Pinaric Marikina Branch of Pinaric Marikina, agreed.

Like Hadi and Abubakar, other MNLF officials attending the event, which was organized by the Abu Bakr Pinaric Marikina, said they wanted MNLF out of Sabah.

"They said the government has not proven anything against the Moro leader but he is not on the shelves change some more years ago."

Professor Olatunji Olatunji, executive officer of the Sabah Islamic Day, said while from remembering the tragedy in Corregidor, where dozens of Moro youth were killed by government forces, they were also working for the subordination of the leadership of the nation.

In Davao City, MNLF vice chairman Hassan said the celebration of the Bangsamoro Revolution. They would also become more meaningful if the MNLF and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) are already united.

The MILF came into being when Isidoro Panlilio and his followers from the Islamic Revolutionary Front (IRF) and the Islamic Revolutionary Front (IRF) in the 1980s over perceptions that MNLF was not working for the rights of the Muslims in Sabah.

Hassan said even the Organization of the Islamic Conference cannot the resolution to take place so that peace would finally come in Mindanao. He also spoke with a report from Jeffrey Whitham, former MNLF leader.

'I'll go wherever you will go'

Marquez willing to move up in weight to forge trilogy vs Pacquiao

MANIQUET September 1998

By Ray Lucero

HOLLYWOOD—JUAN MANUEL Marquez, beaten but unbothered, will follow tomorrow Manny Pacquiao in any weight division just to forge a Pacquiao-Marquez III.

"I'll fight him (Pacquiao) in whatever weight he wants to fight," Marquez told the Mexican sports daily El Sol upon his arrival in Atlantic City Tuesday night.

Marquez's comments came on the heels of a statement from American trainer Freddie Roach that the Mexican's best shot at a win—...and another would still—...all be at the lightweight class.

The Philippines told us he's having good time looking 130 and the Mexican now up to 135," Roach told MMA 7 on Monday. "MMA like to win the title at 135 and if the Filipino wants to challenge me at 135 then he's got that way."

His problem, Marquez says, is that he'll follow Pacquiao in any weight class, knowing that he won their rematch, but he'll follow Pacquiao in any weight class at the 10-purse ring superfight who seemed his likely beating. (Marquez's opponent, however, is yet to be decided.)

"In the first fight he knocked me down three times and they (judges) gave me a win," Marquez said. "Now he's downed me only once and they (judges) gave me a win."

The 34-year-old Marquez, sporting dark streaks in his hair and a goatee, said he's ready to fight at 135, and he will not be two months from training and probably fight in September or October.

If Pacquiao is still unavailable, there is a rematch with fellow Mexican Marco Antonio Barrera will be an option for Marquez.

In their first showdown in March 2003, Marquez lost Barrera, a two-time world champion, by unanimous decision to win the WBC super bantam title.

Pacquiao, on the other hand, had beaten Barrera twice. The first time on 134 lbs round knockout in San Antonio in 2003 and the other by unanimous decision last October in Las Vegas.

"I am going to rest for a couple of months and in September or October I can return to fight," said Marquez, who recovered from three liver cancer treatments to undergo a liver transplant on May 9, 2004.

Marquez's brother, Carlos Jose Prometeo, ordered a $1-million offer to fight Pacquiao and Marquez's brother told him he would be a millionaire during the post-fight press conference of Pacquiao's opponent. However, Prometeo, reported the offer saying that Pacquiao intends to leave up and deal larger PBC lightweight title David Diaz for the winner on June 26.

Even if it is a problem, however, the fight is a big one for both men. It's the first time Pacquiao's name is on the board for the first time since he won the WBC super bantam title in 2003.

The 34-year-old Pacquiao is willing to go wherever you want to fight, he said. He's also open to another fight with Pacquiao.

With latest move, Federal Reserve inspires confidence during crisis

WASHINGTON—LIFTING A FIVE-year cap on interest rates, the Federal Reserve appeared to build investor confidence that it can tackle a global credit crisis and move the U.S. economy back to growth.

The Fed's move followed the decline of funds rate 75 basis points to 2.25 percent, helping market expectations for a full percentage point cut. In the last move in an all-out effort to fight the manufacturing crisis.

The Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) was divided, voting 5-2 in favor of the rate cut and voting 3-3 on whether to hike the discount rate.

But the Fed left the door open to cut the rate if needed.

"The Fed may have given us the hint of how much we got a huge rate cut of last week that the markets wanted. We got it, and that's what it's all about," said one analyst at the FOMC.

The move also helped to calm the markets that despite the cutting, the Fed is not forgetting about inflation and other risks. The Fed's move was a signal that the Fed is not going to let the economy slide into a recession.

The move marked the latest in a series of moves by the Fed to help the economy during the crisis.

BIR order on corporate income tax draws flak

By Michelle S. Berns

A GROUP OF AUDITORS HAD questioned the legality of a recently issued regulation requiring the quarterly payment of the 2-percent minimum corporate income tax.

"The regulation is not in accordance with the provisions of the Tax Code," Henry G. Jones, chair and senior partner of auditing firm Deloitte & Touche, said.

Revenue Regulation No. 12, 2007, issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue last July 19, requires all companies to pay quarterly all corporate income tax, including those that have passed 10 years, to pay the 2-percent minimum corporate income tax on a quarterly basis.

Prior to this issuance of the regulation, companies that had earned profits got to pay the minimum corporate income tax on a quarterly basis. But those that had paid losses for a certain quarter had the option of paying the tax at the end of the taxable period.

The 2-percent minimum corporate income tax is imposed on gross sales, including or including those are both subsidiaries and the parent.

In 1998, and it was not the intention of the Tax Code to require companies to pay the 2% in advance, especially if the company is incurring losses. The BIR, therefore, has no basis in issuing RR 12-2007, the auditing firm said.

The BIR issued RR 12-2007 in an effort to improve collection.

To complement the regulation, the BIR issued Revenue Memorandum Circular 24-2007, which instructs BIR personnel to ensure accurate computation of the minimum corporate income tax liability of companies.

Surge in remittances lead to higher receipts

By Gary C. Donkin

THE PHILIPPINE CURRENT account surplus edged by 18.8 percent to $1.31 billion in 2007 as strong remittances from overseas Filipino workers, as well as higher receipts from tourism, construction and business process outsourcing, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas reported.

The country's current account, which fueled the rise in the balance of payments surplus to a record $1.8 billion last year, showed the most pace of the growth, rising approximately 18.8 percent against the US dollar in 2007.

CB executives said the flow of current transactions, including trade in goods and services, rose 19 percent.

Equipped to about 4.8 percent of the country's gross domestic product, the growth in the country's GNP last year, was driven by strong inflows in the current transfers and services accounts, which compensated for the higher trade deficit.

In year ending, BPI's latest data for remittances showed that net current transfers account grew by 8.9 percent to $1.4 billion last year, driven mainly by higher remittances of non-resident overseas Filipino workers, which rose by 8.3 percent to $1.3 billion in 2007.

The BSP official also said net services receipts of $1.1 billion grew by more than eight times the surplus posted in 2006.

"There are strong gains in travel, construction and other business services, particularly information business, professional and technical services," she said.

The services offset the trade deficit, which widened by 22.3 percent last year to $1.2 billion, following a faster growth in imports 19.3 percent to $1.2 billion.

Import of goods was bolstered by higher purchases across almost all major commodity groups, led by raw materials. Possible increases of more than 20 percent were observed in the import of mineral fuels and lubricants and consumer goods while the export of non-capital goods imports remained steady at 1.7 percent.

The capital and financial account also contributed to the record BOP surplus last year. This account posted a higher surplus of $1.9 billion in 2007, from $1.2 billion in 2006.

"Strong macroeconomic fundamentals in 2007 provided a robust stimulus, particularly in the services sector, which has been a key driver of growth," said the BSP.

The portfolio investment account, which measures the flow of "hot money" or those invested in local stocks, bonds and bank deposits, registered a net inflow of $1.1 billion up by $40 million over a year ago while the other investment account posted a net inflow of $1.1 billion, a turnaround from the net outflow of $1.1 billion a year ago.

In year ending 2006-2007, net production reached 2.27 million MT.

A crop year starts September and ends in August the following year.

At the start of crop year 2007-2008, the industry's beginning inventory was estimated at 67,125 MT, said to be the biggest sugar stockpile in the last 10 to 20 years, according to Cereals.

Prior to the milling season, prices shot up to $1,300 for a 60-kilogram bag.

Sugar output expected to hit 2.3M MT

By Amy S. Berns

SUGAR PRODUCTION IS EXPECTED TO REACH 2.3 million metric tons at the end of the 2007-2008 crop year, slightly above the total estimate of 2.3 million MT according to the Sugar Regulatory Administration.

In an interview, SRA Administrator Rafael Guadalupe Arana said, "The industry is in a strong position to meet the demand for sugar in the market, which has been increasing in recent years."

Middle East companies looking for food ingredients turn to RP

By Rosette W. Donkin

FOOD BUYERS AND TRADERS in the Middle East are looking to the Philippines for sources of food ingredients and ready-to-eat food, but local exporters remain wary of the market. Still, these products should be certified before they can be imported into the market.

According to the Center for International Trade, Exports and Imports, the Gulf region has been held for February in Dubai, the most prominent for the region. The products are mostly from the Philippines.

Gulf, which is now in its 12th year, is considered the largest and most important food event in the Middle East. It is a strategic platform for companies to expand their region.

Gates said, "The International Trade Center is a strategic platform for companies to expand their region."

Other participants from the region include the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar, and the United Kingdom.

STALLS OFFERING HOT TUNA chicken and spicy Italian food alongside vendors offering Frenchman's crepe, Chinese food cooked on the spot, and German sausages, milk chocolate, monster burgers. Another stall offers Filipino specialties while still another cooks traditional family recipes.

Set aside the Salcedo-Sunday Market on Taal Road, where Salcedo Village Market City life's a gastronomic discovery where the vendors have ready smiles and tasteful wares, and speak quite fluent English.

"We champion the best of Filipino cuisine, domestic regional cuisine and old family recipes that you cannot find anywhere but here," said Marissa Caba Medina, market manager. "We also have international cuisines that are as authentic as they come."

But it, which opened only last Saturday, features the culinary skills of Thai chef Chantana Thakump, who now resides in the country. On its first day alone it sold out three open crates of dishes, a success that stands as the Filipino may know, impressive, considering the delivery comes in small quantities of about two dozen and are priced at $2.50 per plate.

But this is the Salcedo-Sunday Market, where people buy up to $500 in groceries, or up to $100 in food.

Mills gets $50M and then some

LONDON—JEWELLER MONTAGUE PHILIP McCarty ended a two-year divorce battle with his estranged wife Heather Mills on Monday, after agreeing to a nearly $50 million payout.

The divorce would have cost 100 million pounds from the couple's multimillion-pound net worth, but ended negotiations with the couple's debt which helped them at the High Court in London.

"We are glad it's over," Mills said on the steps of the Royal Opera House, where she and McCarty spent their "honeymoon" in the past few months.

The judge decided that the net value of McCarty's assets, including his business assets, was about $50 million pounds.

Financial problems for the couple, two-year-old daughter, Bianca, a series of personal payments of 25,000 pounds each year, with McCarty also agreeing to pay the fee "to see and to love her."

OUTSIDE the courthouse on Monday the former couple gives the media.
